Romance Scams

Romance scams are becoming increasingly popular and profitable for the scam artist/s who use them. They purposefully mislead unsuspecting victims in hopes of finding a romantic connection online and turn it into a long depressing path of disappointment for the victim.

Why is Money Required?

Some common reasons as to why the money is required includes:

- various investment opportunities
- lawyer fees to collect an inheritance
- medical expenses from a surgery or motor vehicle accident
- to assist to a family member who has been taken hostage

The scammer will always promise to repay the money and may say with interest however they have no intention in paying the money back. The scammer will continue to make up new stories to get more money from the victim until the victim has no more resources to send or they realize that the person/s they are developing a rapport with is a scammer.

BCSI can Help!

Once you suspect that someone is running a scam, the most effective way to deal with it is cease all communications with them immediately and block them from contacting you by any means. They will likely move on to their next target. If the relationship reaches the point of them asking you for money, do not send it, just simply reply that you do not have funds available to send. This may send a flag to the scammer and they may stop communicating with you which will be difficult for a number of people who do feel a genuine connection to the person however, you may have just saved yourself thousands in a financial sense.

Lastly, there are a number of resources available on the web that go into great detail about the type romance scams people have fallen victim to.
