As the grey market receives more exposure, companies will begin to take note and begin to devise a strategy to help prevent their product from losing any market value. Much like the counterfeit prevention, grey market goods require a well-planned and well thought out investigation often utilizing undercover operations to go a long with extensive research on the unauthorized importers as well as the group selling the product.

Companies will either hire a third party firm or create an internal division dedicated to solving the issue and presenting their lawyers with the evidence required to try and stop the sale and purchases of their product to any unauthorized entities.

Private Investigating firms can be utilized to serve the needs of any client company looking to stop the sale of grey market goods within their distribution network.

As directed by the client, private investigators main priority is to focus on the collection of intelligence on any suspected unauthorized seller within the selected domestic market.

Once a product is purchased from the unauthorized seller, it can be provided to the client/designer to ensure its authenticity and to determine which supply network that product came through so further investigations can be conducted.

The information noted above is just the basics, BCSI always will strive to go above and beyond client's expectations just as we have in the past 15 years of business. BCSI has conducted several successful anti-counterfeit operations using our Integrated Counterfeit Enforcement System (ICES). We work very closely with our client's to ensure we understand their need and providing the right service for each individual case. BCSI will assist in the prevention of grey market goods by conducting any company due diligence on current or perspective vendors to ensure that they are not involved in the sale of grey market goods. BCSI can develop and implement undercover operations to acquire the necessary intelligence to end the product being shipped to unauthorized sellers. BCSI is able to monitor your brand online to locate any other possible sources for grey market goods. These are just a few of the services we can offer our clients. Feel free to give us a call and make an inquiry with one of our private investigators.
