Introduction

In this 3 part series we will discuss personal safety while travelling, hotel safety, and shopping abroad and currency safety. Personal safety is an important factor while travelling whether it's for business or pleasure. It is important to read about hotel room safety and especially currency safety prior to departing on your trip.

Personal Safety When Travelling

Personal safety is an important factor to you and your family. You should always be looking out for your safety, but when travelling you should be more vigilant.

You might be out of town on a business trip, visiting friends or family, or exploring the beauty of different countries, but when you are away from home you are out of your element. You don't know your way around or the high crime areas of your destination. There are a number of ways you can protect yourself while travelling.

The number one way of increasing your personal safety while traveling is to travel with other people, as this will decrease your exposure of being victimized. Criminals are far more likely to target and attack an individual than they are to go after a pair or a group.

Crime experts say that for each additional person in your group, your personal safety is greatly increased. Interviews with criminals in prison reveal the same thing - they always prefer targeting someone who is alone rather than a group of people. The more people that are in your group, the more the criminal has to work with and there are more ways for things to go wrong.

There are many times that you will have to travel by yourself and if that occurs don't go trekking off by yourself into unknown parts of your destination area without a guide. Always be extra cautious when travelling alone. Prior to leaving for your destination, go to the local library or research online to learn how you will be able to explore the new area you are in with guides, tour buses, or other people who are travelling.

Due diligence is the first task to be completed prior to traveling.
