COVID-19 Scams

COVID-19 has swept around the world, changing normal life for the foreseeable future. Unfortunately, fraudsters have exploited the crisis to scam citizens. Now more than ever, it is important for Canadians to come together and stay vigilant. Here are some tips to protect yourself from being taken advantage of during these unprecedented times:

Use trusted sources:

- Stay up to date with the latest information from Health Officials.
- Government of Canada - COVID-19 Outbreak Update

Get tested at accredited labs

- Do not pay to be tested.
- Only health care providers can perform the test.

Be wary of emails or calls claiming to be from the CDC or WHO

- Examples of suspicious behavior include unsolicited email attachments, requesting personal information, providing links to unverified websites, or offering fake lists for sale of COVID-19 infected people in your area.

Do not trust "miracle cures"

- This includes things such as "special" air filters, household decontamination services, or hand sanitizers.

Verify before donating to charities.

- Charities can be verified through the Government of Canada website.
- The Red Cross is not offering free medical products in exchange for a donation.

If you did not initiate the call, do not give out personal information

- Even if the call appears to be from Public Health Agency of Canada. Scammers are pretending to have your test results, that you tested positive and tricking you into confirming your health card or credit card.
