What is Adware?

Advertising-supported software, also more commonly known as Adware, is software that displays advertisements on your devices. They pop up in your browser multiple times on random occasions, disrupt your online activities, and may slow down your devices. It is also possible for Adware to track your online behavior and personalize the displayed ads.

Adware can spread in many ways. One method is by downloading free software that has Adware bundled in without your knowledge. Another method is visiting infected websites that take advantage of vulnerabilities within the browser and download Adware into your device.

combined experience, BCSI Investigations Inc. is the platinum standard for private investigations.
